

EGGY -- Saco Lake Bath House

This project is about designing a bath house near the edge of the Saco Lake with the primary focus on light, material, and landscape. I chose a site that was on the steeper slope of the northern hill, where the topographic change could be leveraged to accommodate the two levels of the house. It was kept away from the heavy traffic area, meanwhile allowing access from a narrow path into the quieter forests. It was also oriented to give a broad view of the lake through the dense trees.
